

Contents

International studies in an unpredictable world: still avoiding the difficult problems?	3
Ivan Fomin, Konstantin Kokarev, Boris Ananyev, Nikita Neklyudov, Anzhelika Bondik, Pavel Glushkov, Aliya Safina, Svetlana Stolyarova, Dmitry Tkach, Oksana Vedernikova and Irina Yakovenko, Daria Korobkova, Daria Kovaleva, Ekaterina Kuzina, Darya Voronina, Alexander Chekov, Andrey Sushentsov and William Wohlforth
Power and International Relations: a temporal view	29
Daniel Drezner
A ritual approach to deterrence: I am, therefore I deter	53
Maria Mälksoo
The things they carry: Victims' documentation of forced disappearance in Colombia and Sri Lanka	79
Kate Cronin-Furman and Roxani Krystalli
The (de)legitimation of torture: rhetoric, shaming and narrative contestation in two British cases	102
Frank Foley
The ontological threat of foreign fighters	127
Raphaël Leduc
Reflexive discourse analysis: A methodology for the practice of reflexivity	150
Audrey Alejandro
Fragmenting and connecting? The diverging geometries and extents of IR's interdisciplinary knowledge-relations	175
Stephen Aris
The prejudice first model and foreign policy values: racial and religious bias among conservatives and liberals	204
Richard Hanania and Robert Trager

Trickstery: pluralising stigma in international society Xymena Kurowska and Anatoly Reshetnikov	232
Dugong v. Rumsfeld : social movements and the construction of ecological security Claudia Junghyun Kim	258
What kills international organisations? When and why international organisations terminate Mette Eilstrup-Sangiovanni	281
Institutional design for a post-liberal order: why some international organizations live longer than others Maria Josepha Debre and Hylke Dijkstra	311